

SAMPLE Four Year Plan | Bachelor of Science - Communication Sciences and Disorders

The curriculum in the College of Education and Professional Studies is structured so that students move through classes in a prescribed order. Prerequisites are important and are strongly enforced. The four year plan illustrates the type of curriculum a new freshman could take to complete a degree in four years; it is not an official document. Refer to Academic Advising Report for full requirements.

Courses require Admission to the Communication Sciences and Disorders program. You will not be allowed to register for these courses without applying and being admitted to the Communication Sciences and Disorders program.

Third Year Advising Notes: EDFOUND 243 is preferred if you want to be licensed to work in schools.

Goals: Complete your graduate school applications during the summer after your third year and decide who you would like to ask to write your letters of recommendation for graduate school. The UWW Masters program in Communication Sciences and Disorders does not require the GRE for admission, however, students will want to research whether or not this is a requirement for other graduate school programs so that they can plan accordingly.

After your third year: Work with your faculty advisor to make sure you're on track to graduate. Continue to seek major-related employment.

Students must begin their Math and English sequences with the appropriate course. The English course a student starts with will be determined by their ACT English or SAT Verbal score. The Math course a student starts with will be determined by their UW System math placement score.

Admission requirements: combined cumulative GPA of 2.75, 45 completed credits, completion of Physics 130, 212, or 240 with a C- or better and completion of Biology 120 with a C- or better, completion of COMDIS 270, and a 3.0 or better in COMDIS 278, 272, and 240.

Students who complete the Communication Sciences and Disorders Bachelor of Science degree will receive the academic and pre-professional training necessary for more specialized study at the graduate level. A graduate degree is required to work in most settings as a speech-language pathologist or audiologist. The undergraduate program's focus on human development and disability also provides a solid academic foundation for students who wish to pursue other related careers in human services.

This program does not require completion of a minor. However, it is recommended that students complete a minor that they enjoy and/ or matches their career interests and will contribute to their marketability after graduation. Students can choose any minor offered at UW- Whitewater, but should consult an advisor concerning minor options.
